The Symposium Topic

For over 50 years the name »Reinhardtsbrunn« has become famous in scientific circles for the Symposium series which draws together fungicide scientists from academia, research institutes and industry to present, listen to and discuss the latest research findings in this fast moving field.

Such research is a vital component in the quest to provide adequate control of the fungi that threaten the world's food supply and commodity products. Only by discovering new active molecules by synthetic chemistry or from natural sources and by understanding how they work and how best to use them, can we hope to maintain and improve the quality of life for the world's growing population.

The 2019 Symposium will build upon the Reinhardtsbrunn reputation by providing an opportunity for established experts and those just starting on their scientific career to present information to an international audience through oral presentations and posters. In addition, outstanding experts as key note speakers will introduce into the symposium and the single topical sessions. There will be ample time to discuss the findings and their implications both during and after the presentations. The Symposium thus also provides a unique opportunity to establish new contacts and friendships within fungicide science.

It is the intention of the Symposium Committee to arrange a well balanced program with sufficient time for discussion.

The contributions of the Symposium will be published as Proceedings of the Reinhardtsbrunn-Series »Modern Fungicides and Antifungal Compounds« Vol. IX.

We would be very happy to have you as an active participant in this Symposium.
